

Discussion 4-22-10: Freedom and Morality

Observing all we see happening in the U.S.A. regarding our Nation substantiates the need for revised public opinion. These United States of America were founded on principles of limited government, free enterprise, morality, and individual freedom and liberty. Government should not be nationalizing private enterprise.

Morality enables business to serve honestly. The United States of America, as a free society, depends upon morality to continue operating within the limits of our Constitution. Without morality, this Nation fails!

Why do we think prayers in school are unacceptable? Do we honor our U.S.A. flag with the pledge of allegiance in school? Do we promote and demand accurate American history? Liberty and freedom require continuous protection. Our guard, individually and nationally, should never falter. These questions need to be answered by our citizens.

Freedom provided opportunity for William Petersen from Dewitt, Nebraska, to develop the Vice-Grip. Bill Gates engineered Microsoft. The pot bellied stove by Ben Franklin, the telephone by Edison, and thousands of other patents were created by Americans. In a free county, necessity empowers creative ignition of ideas motivated by opportunity for tangible reward within the Constitution.

In conclusion, morality of our citizens is a key element of our individual freedom, which we enjoy in the United States of America, thanks to the common sense of the founding fathers when writing the Constitution.

God Bless America,
